U.S. Green Building Council® & LEED®
The U.S. Green Building Council’s LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) program is the world’s most widely recognized green building rating system and the vehicle for adopting high-performance green building. Knoll is aligned with the USGBC to support companies, governmental agencies, healthcare organizations and educational institutions achieve LEED certification.

Many products are eligible for LEED credits and can contribute to LEED certification.

Declare
Declare is a labeling program administered by the International Living Future Institute in support of Living Building Challenge projects. The label is a materials transparency platform and associated database that provides consumers with a quick and relevant resource to help them make, what is contained, and options for end of life disposal. Knoll is dedicated to achieving Declare leadership for all our products.

Living Building Challenge
The International Living Future Institute’s Living Building Challenge is a program designed to create new protocols and research-backed strategies created to advance human health, happiness, and productivity in built environments. The WELL standard establishes a system of metrics that Concept that addresses various influences in small scale—air, water, nutrition, light, fitness, temperature, sounds, materials, mind and community.

Building a Better World
As a result of furnishing projects, there is often a significant quantity of no longer needed and consumer products, which provides opportunities for products from leading manufacturing and re-manufactures them using certified sustainable materials.

We’re committed to sustainable design and third-party certification at knoll.com/environment.
